Headline:
Dry and quite cloudy for most, but more sunshine later.

Today:
Cloudy again for most through the morning, with some drizzle across high ground. Dry through the afternoon as cloud breaks up, creating widespread sunny spells, these most prolonged in the south and west. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Tonight:
Sunny spells through the evening, especially in western areas as cloud continues to thin, but turning cloudier elsewhere overnight. Feeling cooler under the clear skies in the west. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Saturday:
Variable cloud through the day, with the sunniest conditions across the south and west of the country. Some sunny spells for most though during the afternoon and evening. Staying dry. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Dry and bright on Sunday, though cloudier later with some rain in the north overnight into Monday. Staying mostly dry further south. Plenty of sunshine on Tuesday. Turning warmer.
